Comparative Value of Balls.

Ohlo Former.

A recent writer says that a good Shorthorn or Hereford bull will sire fifty calves a year for ten years. A common scrub steer 4 years old will make 1000 pounds live weight, worth 3 cents a pound, or $30.

A hall-bred Shorthorn or Hereford grade steer, 3 years, will make 1400 pounds, or $70. It costs something less for one year's feeding and herding, say $5. The difference in value, then, is $45, and multiplying the annual product of fifty by forty-five and we get $2,250 as the yearly gain, or $22,500 in ten years. If the stockman is satisfied with 50 per cent on his investment he can afford to give exactly $3,750 for his bull. This sum produces $1,375 every year, or $18,750 in ten years, and this, with the price of the bull, makes the total sum mentioned. The profit for a good Ayrshire, Dutch or Jersey bull in a dairy would be still more.

The Quaker Poet at Seventy-six Yes

At seventy six years and over one can be said to have the beanty only of age, striking as that is in Mr. Whittier's case, with the dark eye and the full beard, where black lines still appear among the silver, while his form is as straight and his step is as firm and elabtic as ever. But the poet's youthful beauty is reported to have been extraordinary: very tall, erect, and well knit, with fine features, dark skin, and a flashing, deep,set black eye, he could not have looked the Ωaaker to any extent; and in fact we think he is more of a Quaker in labit and affection than anything else. nabit and affection than anything else

He has himself recognized that

"Over restless wings of song His birthright garb hung loote," His birthright garb aung loote," and even though he clings to the forms of the sect in many respects, using the plain language generally, and tells somewhere why he prefers the silence of the meeting for worship rather than any sollitude oi wood or wild where Nature speaks to him with a thousand voices and catches him with a thousand hands, yet he dresses so nearly like men of the world in cut and color that only practiced eyes could detect the slight difference in the shape of his cost, and his feelings about such matters are entirely liberal. When his little niece wanted the scarlet cape that other children wanted the scarlet cape that other children wore, and there was objection in the house on account of the Quaker custom, Mr. Whittier insisted that she should be gratified, although, sooth to say, poet as he is, he can not tell red from green as he 's, he can not tell red from green till sunlight falls upon it. Once, indeed, the library fire, of which he is so fond, having damaged the border of the wall-paper, he matched the pattern and triumphantly replaced it before detection; only to learn that he had substituted for the green vine one of bright autumnal crimson. Yet so strong is the poet's imsegnation that this defect of vision is nowhere evident in his work, although one might gather there that while, as he says, "his eye was beauty's powerless slave."

"Who has be seem that if it had done it both of them would be mad."

"It's called his boy here a nigger, and I remarked that if I had done it both of them would be mad."

"It's jis' likey ole 'comin wid her ole man," said Hez. "She'll call him a lez, good fur nuthin' loafer ten times a day, but if yo' er me call him half as bad names atipasise club us wid de broam stick."

To Destroy Rose-Bugs.

Rural New Forker.

Of all agents employed to destroy rose-bugs none of them have been so successful as dry-alacked lime. There were one or two other preparations which prevented the attacks of the pests, but they are too expensive. The lime can be bought for from 15 to 30 cents per bushel at the kiln, and one bushel of the stone will make three when slacked. It can be applied broadcast and rapidly. If applied after rain we are satisfied that it is a sure preventive. We never had to little damage done by the pests since they began to come in force. It is tu slers to attempt to destroy them, as their presence is everywhere while they stay—on the sand vegication of all kinds. To repel them with something seems to be the only remedy.
